Foreword

The database at Slavevoyages.org returns no less than 36,074 voyages; recording the itineraries of thousands of ‘slavers’ that participated in the Transatlantic Slave trade. Of these, scores of vessels, embarking on 450 voyages, ‘carried’ Africans directly to the island of Dominica. Accounting for at least 110,000 of the 12.5 million Africans presumed captured and sold into slavery in the Americas.

The returns reveal that the majority were associated with British traders registered in Liverpool, Bristol, Lancashire and London. However, a significant number were French-registered slave ships setting sail from harbours in Dunkerque, La Rochelle, Bordeaux, Honfleur and Le Havre. Other nations also feature, such as slave trading vessels from, Holland, Portugal and others are found among the records.

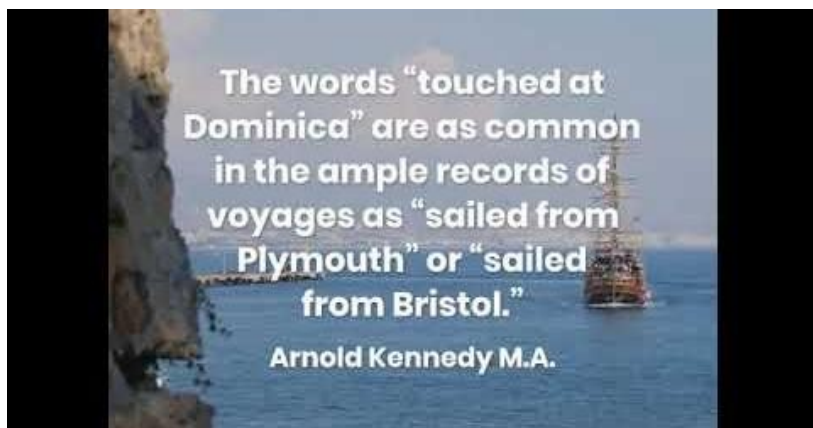

Brookes slave ship plan

No less than 110,000 Africans were imported as slaves in to Dominica from the 1700s, particularly after Dominica was ceded to the British following the Seven years war. Many would be sold to neighbouring French planters in Guadeloupe and Martinique, others were sold elsewhere in the Greater British Caribbean. Arnold Kennedy M.A. in his contribution to The Story of the West Indies, in the 1889 reader, The Story of Empire, wrote that Dominica had long been the first contact of many ships crossing the Atlantic. Indeed he wrote, “The words touched at Dominica are as common in the ample records of voyages as “sailed from Plymouth” or “sailed from Bristol.”

In one anecdote, he wrote, “After being becalmed for eighteen days, Hawkins’ ships reached Dominica at last by help of the Ordinary Breeze ” (the Trade Wind), which they had been longing for; badly in want of water and glad to scoop up the rain from the pools of which supply, one is glad to notice, the negroes got their share.”

The Story of the West Indies
by Arnold Kennedy

Meantime, The English author, Alec Waugh, that eminent authority of West Indian history, in his 1964 publication ‘A Family of Islands (page 23) backed this up, when he wrote, “For a Westbound European ship the first natural port of call was Dominica, and the Gulf Stream would carry it back to Europe either by the Florida Channel, north of Cuba, or by the Windward Passage, past Jamaica, North of Hispaniola.”

A fact not lost on the most infamous explorer of them all, Sir Walter Raleigh (1560 – 1621). He wrote in his The Discovery of Guiana “those Indians of Trinidad have plates of gold from Guiana , and those Cannibals of Dominica which dwell in the islands by which our ships pass yearly to the West Indies.”

The slave voyages database identifies the regions in Africa where most of my African descendants in Dominica were captured, stored in slave castles along the West African coast, and then later endured the gruelling 4-6 week journey known as the middle passage across the Atlantic chained and crammed into slave ships with names such as: Fly, Black Joke, Prince of Wales and Charles.

The database identifies, Gambia, Bonny, Bassa, Bight of Biafra, Gulf of Guinea Islands, Saint-Louis, Calabar, Anomabu, New Calabar, Banana Island, Cape Mount, Sierra Leone Estuary, Gambia, Popo, West Central Africa, Cameroons, Iles de Los and Cameroon River as regions from where most of the enslaved in Dominica originated from.

According to Wikipedia, “Based on these records, the majority of African slaves came from the Bight of Biafra, of present-day south-eastern Nigeria (Igbo, Ibibio) and coastal Cameroon comprising 62% of the 57,000 slaves imported to Dominica. Other slaves were from Senegal, Gambia, Sierra Leone (4.8%), Windward Coast (11%), Liberia particularly people of the Bassa's Kru ethnic group, Ghana (3% Akan), Benin (1%) the Popo Kingdom, Congo-Brazzaville (Loango Kingdom (82 individuals), Angola (Ambundu) and Southeast of Africa (670 individuals), the Congo and Angola (6.7%). Other slaves in Dominica belonged to the Yoruba, Ewe, Fula, Kongo and Wolof ethnic groups.”

Slave ships

The slave ships that arrived in the ‘lonely roadstead’ of Roseau, the colony’s capital, situated on a large alluvial fan through which a river runs on the Leeward side of the island, once the site of an ancient Carib village called ‘Sairi.’ “on a point of land on the southwest side of the island, which point forms two bays, woodville to the North, and Charlottville to the South”(Washington 1889).

On average, 450 Africans were shipped per voyage to Dominica, calculated at about 10,000 slaves per month. For example, The Vine, a 150-tonne ship, armed with 4 guns, and captained by a Rumbold Thomas, set sail from Liverpool on May 16, 1766, for Africa. It left Bonny on August 28, 1766 with 400 enslaved African men, women and children, and arrived in Dominica in December at a port unspecified with 400 Africans from Bonny.

William Davenport, a major 18th century, British, slave trader and merchant from Liverpool, landed his first cargo of slaves at Dominica in 1769. Davenport is said to have financed over 160 slaving voyages, in over 70 ships including the Fox, that arrived in Dominica from Old Calabar. (Voyages Database 91553). According to author of William Davenport, the Slave Trade, and Merchant Enterprise in Eighteenth Century Liverpool, a thesis by James Radburn, “The enslaved cargo averaged £30 per person; a substantial improvement on the £25-27 per person Davenport received from Barbados and Grenada at the same time (Trading Accounts of the Dobson and Fox 1769-1771, ODAV).”

The colonization of Dominica gathered momentum following the survey of Dominica by John Byres, between the years

1765 to 1773, of Crown lands on the newly-acquired, rugged Dominica, and the consequent sale of the same by the lot. The slave-based plantation model was installed in Dominica, the very last of the British captured islands to be settled. A model much in line with that which had previously been established in the older sugar colonies of Jamaica and Barbados.

Along the Roseau Bayfront, the Barracoon building, constructed in the 1760s is still standing. It is one of three surviving barracoon buildings used during the slave trade that still exist in the world. Those Africans that survived the ordeal of the capture; the time spent in dungeons of slave forts scattered throughout the West African coast, and then the ignominious, Atlantic voyage. Those that survived were housed at the Barracoon, before being led in chains to the auction slab on the nearby cobblestones of the Market Square.

According to a blog dedicated to Memorial Drinking Fountains, “The historic market located in the center of the town was a major trading site between Dominica and neighbouring islands. Public executions also took place in the market square, and slave auctions were commonplace.” By the time they arrived in Dominica, as data from slave voyages indicate many would have perished in Africa, and during the 6-week voyage.

In this extract from Radburn’s 2009 thesis, he reveals the competitive nature of the trade in human beings at its height before the decline of the Transatlantic Slave Trade. In this reference to a report to Davenport by Peter Potter, captain of the slave ship Essex regarding Davenport’s last venture in the slave trade:

“The rush of ships to the Guinea coast placed a considerable strain on African markets,” adding that, “the trade was very slack because of the number of slave ships at Old Calabar.” According to Radburn, the “319 enslaved Africans that Potter purchased were “old & thin” with the result that “he had the misfortune to bury ninety, and twenty-four of the remainder were either in the doctors list or thin or under size.”

According to a Wikipedia entry, Captain of the Brooks, “George Hault, sailed from Liverpool on 29 July 1791 and arrived in Africa on 22 September. Brooks had gathered her slaves at Bonny and left Africa on 10 December. She delivered 408 slaves to Dominica on 26 January 1792. She left Dominica on 14 March and arrived back at Liverpool on 27 April. She had left Liverpool with 38 crew members and suffered one crew death on her voyage. Brooks” (Wikipedia) In another entry, an account of Little Joe “...arrived at Barbados with 310 slaves and sailed for Dominica on 4 January 1785. She was at Dominica on 21 January 1785 with 309 slaves.

She left Dominica on 18 March and arrived back at Liverpool on 24 April.” (Wikipedia), “Meanwhile, “On 25th April 1837 one slave-ship, the brig Don Francisco was seized as a prize near the island of Dominica by Her Majesty’s Brigantine Griffon. At that time the Don Francisco had 433 slaves on board and was in a near sinking state.”

Yet another Wikipedia entry on the captain of the slave ship Othello, reads, “McGauley eventually gathered slaves, and then delivered them to Dominica. He arrived on 2 December 1788 with 150 slaves, having embarked 185, for a mortality rate of 19%. She left Dominica on 1 February 1789, and arrived back at Liverpool on 16 March. Othello had a crew of 36 when she started out on the voyage and she lost 21 crew members during the voyage.”

Royal views on Dominica

In December of 1786, HMS Boreas under the command of the Senior Naval Officer of the Leeward Islands, Horatio Nelson, was stationed in the Leeward Islands following the recapture of Dominica by the British from France in 1783. On December 3, 1786, the third son of King George III, Prince William Henry, aged 21, arrived in Roseau Dominica. “He was the only member of the Royal family to ever step foot in the West Indies during the Colonial era”. 93 years later, in 1879, “Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, and his younger brother, Prince George, who later became King George V, also visited Dominica as naval cadets on HMS Bacchante and were entertained at the Robinson House which was afterwards named Clarence Hall.”

The young royal, Prince William, joined the Royal navy at the age of 14 as a midshipman, and was deployed to North America and the West Indies, sailing to Jamaica, then Barbados, St Vincent, Dominica and Antigua. By 1827, he was “appointed as Britain’s first Lord High Admiral since 1709”. He would eventually accede to the throne as William IV, reigning from 1830 – 1837, earning him the moniker of ‘Sailor King.’

In 1786, he was in command of the Frigate Pegasus on his visit to Dominica where he witnessed British colonial slavery first-hand, and noted in a private letter to his father, King George III, that the island [Dominica] was an important slave trading base. “The trade in slaves at this island is very great owing to our supplying the French with that valuable commodity,” he opined. In later years, he was a “vocal defender of colonial slavery, and a leading ally of the West India Committee in London.” In 1799, as the Duke of Clarence and heir to the throne, he delivered a pro-slavery speech in the House of Lords, in which he glorified British colonialism referencing his own ‘eyewitness knowledge of conditions in the Caribbean islands’.

Ironically, the Duke of Clarence, Prince William Henry, was the third child and son of King George III and Queen Charlotte. Queen Charlotte it is written is said to have African ancestry, “being directly descended from Margarita de Castro y Sousa, a Black branch of the Portuguese royal house.” Meanwhile, in an 1886, a postcolonial publication Cruise of H.M.S. Bacchante 1879 -1882, attributed to the journals of Prince Albert Victor and Prince George of Wales, as an account of the three years they served aboard the H.M.S. Bacchante, on page 116, the princes join the chorus of colonial commentators on the deplorable neglect, and the ghostly appearance, of the town of Roseau:

“Sloping down from this last and crossing what used to be the old market-place, but which is now all overgrown with grass and weeds, you come out on the edge of the cliff just opposite our anchorage ; and from this further to the south runs a long tumbledown street, grass-grown, though once paved, and with the ruined stone foundations of many once respectable houses on either side. Now, only a few dirty-looking wooden negro huts, each in its own garden, can be seen here — some built on the foundations of the former houses that were burnt down by the French in 1781, others in the gardens.”

Of the abolition of the Slave Trade, and the emancipation of the slaves, he said:

“The fact is that the West Indies are, at present, a glaring example of the terrible penalties following on reckless acts of inconsiderate sentiment which have been the curse of English statesmanship in the nineteenth century. Englishmen,” he said, “enfranchised the West Indian slaves, and paid a not inconsiderable sum as compensation,” adding, “As it was, the negroes, from being slaves of one kind, which often was slavery only in name, became slaves in reality, though free men in name. Emancipated suddenly they had neither the means, energy, nor education, to support themselves; free citizenship did but debase, and demoralise them.”

132 years later in 2018, in the E II R era, royal views on the impact of colonialism and slavery have shifted with the passage of time, at least from the perspective of the current Prince of Wales. According to H.R.H Prince Charles, the eldest son and heir apparent to the reigning, and ageing Monarch, H.M Queen Elizabeth II, in a speech during a visit to the Christiansborg Castle in Osu, a former Danish slave trade fort Ghana, said, “The appalling atrocity of the slave trade, and the unimaginable suffering it caused, left an indelible stain on the history of our world.”

Prince Charles toured Antigua, Barbuda and Dominica in November of 2017, in the aftermath of the devastation of two September, category-5 hurricanes: ‘Irma’ that ravished many islands in the Leewards, and in the Greater Antilles, and ‘Maria’ that devastated Dominica and Puerto Rico that year.

He described the destruction as “utterly heartbreaking,” (The Guardian)
